Journal of Computing website, which allows authors to receive the page proofs of their articles in electronic form. Article proofs are PDF files generated from the typesetting of your article. You may also receive article proofs in electronic form if you request to use PDF files and your browser is not able to download them. However, if you do not have Adobe Acrobat Reader installed on your computer, go to http://www.adobe.com/products/acrobat/readstep2.html to download the latest version of the software. To check your article: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Download the Article Page Proof file and attach Support Document by double-clicking on the file name. 2. You will be asked for a username and password to open the Article Page Proof file. This information appears at the top of the e-mail message. Both the username and password are case sensitive. 3. Save the document file to a hard-disk file on your computer's hard drive. Link to your PDF and Attach Support Document: Article Page Proof: http://www.adobe.com/acrobat/readstep2.html?username=robert@cs.cmu.edu&password=robert@cs.cmu.edu 4. Open the file with Adobe Acrobat Reader and print it out on your computer's printer to access editing tools. 5. Print out the article for information only. Do not make any changes to the article. Do not be surprised to see errors in the page proofs. All changes are made on the original of the proof. This is your main source of information on article proofs. Please remember to save a backup of your article proofs proof files in case you have a problem with your computer or the journal's website. You may also want to print out the proofs for your records.

08-04-20	Introduction Cervical cancer is a malignant tumor growing inside the neck of the uterus/cervix at the lowest part of the uterine which sticks on the branch at the top of the vagina. The cancer has surpassed heart disease as the top cause of death for Filipinas in the United States; therefore, it is even more critical to focus on early detection of cancer in this population.¹ Cervical cancer usually attacks elderly women between 35 to 75 years of age.² A very high percentage (80-90%) of cervical cancer cases originate from squamous, which can cause death among women.³ The prevalence of cervical cancer is high in the member states of the European Union (EU), with approximately 34,000 new cases of cervical cancer and 13,000 annual deaths.⁴ The prevalence of cervical cancer is particularly high. These conclusions are drawn based on the highest rates in Romania and Lithuania (13.7/100,000 and 10.0/100,000, respectively) and the lowest rate in Finland (1.1/100,000).⁵ According to the Globocan data in 2018, new cases of cervical cancer in Indonesia reached 32,463 people. Tribun news reported that mortality due to cervical cancer has reached 16,379 per year. This means that approximately 50 Indonesian women died because of cervical cancer. The number has increased if one were to compare this to the Globocan data which states that in 2012, 26 Indonesian women died because of cervical. The latest Globocan data aligned with the research in Indonesia detected the occurrence of cervical cancer in 1 out of 1,000 women and an average of approximately 40 to 60 women died within a day.⁶ published online April 8, 2020 DOI: 10.1016/j.ijng.2020.100938 ISSN 2454-0704 ©2020 Spring House Cancer Foundation & Young Researchers Group of IIS License: CC BY-NC-ND 4.0
